Major Offered Through:

CORVALLIS

Umpqua
Community College

Digital Communication Arts

We educate capable managers of media change. What does this mean? Our program combines state-of-the-art technical skills with rigorous course work in humanities, arts, and social sciences to build your portfolio of skills and knowledge as a communication professional. Our focus areas are social media, cultural analytics, transmedia, media effects, animation, interaction design, and virtual reality: this is a decidedly future facing list of program areas.

Students are better positioned for legacy media careers, like journalism or television production, when they are educated in approaches the near future, not the increasingly distant past. Our philosophy of teaching holds that we do our best when we teach you how to continue to learn and grow, not which buttons to push today, this is how we educate capable managers of change.
