German

World Languages and Cultures offers a major in German in Corvallis and via Ecampus. German is a language that can create professional pathways both locally and globally. There are 1,200 German-owned companies in the United States, some of the largest of which are active in the state of Oregon, such as: DaimlerChrysler, Freightliner, Wacker Chemie, Siltronic, Adidas, Reebok and SolarWorld AG. Outside of the U.S., 100 million EU residents speak German as their native language, making German the most widely spoken mother tongue in Europe.

Another 31 percent of EU residents speak German as a second language. German exports constitute the largest share of total world trade (even ahead of the U.S.), and is the second most important import market in the world, and the third most important import partner of the United States. Culturally speaking, around 46 million Americans claim German ancestors, making it the largest heritage group in the country. From connecting to one's heritage to working in a global context for a multinational company, learning German can open up a world of exciting possibilities.
