ECAMPUS

Klamath Community College

Women, Gender, & Sexuality Studies

Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies offers a multi-disciplinary approach to the study of gender and sexuality, particularly as they intersect with race, ethnicity, class, culture religion, nation, and disability. WGSS students develop a critical interdisciplinary skill, preparing them to contribute creative solutions to social change. Our classes are student-centered and discussion-oriented, and students develop training in critical thinking that can be applied to a diversity of work and broader life contexts.

Queer Studies is an interdisciplinary field that examines how gender, sexuality and ideas of "normal" work together with race, ethnicity, class, disability, and more to create social categories that result in structural, institutional, and ideological discrimination—and further—imagines and works towards social justice for all people. Our curriculum centers on perspectives and critical approaches that focus on Queer Indigenous/Two-Spirit critiques, Queer of Color Critiques, Transgender & Gender Non-Conforming critiques, Queer Disability activism, and other grassroots movements for radical social change.
