

Couples Consultations and Domestic Violence: Experimental Results of Family Planning Decisions in Tanzania

Aine McCarthy, Assistant Professor of Economics, Lewis & Clark

Aine McCarthy joined the Economics Department at Lewis & Clark in 2016. She completed her Ph.D. in applied economics at University of Minnesota. Her fields of research include international development, microeconomics, demography, health and behavior.

Dr. McCarthy uses experimental methods, extensive fieldwork and econometrics to address policy questions in health and development. Her dissertation research measures the impact of a community family planning program in rural Tanzania.

DECEMBER 1ST
10am—11:30am

Bexell 414