

2021 OSU ARCHAEOLOGY FIELD SCHOOL AT THE DEVILS KITCHEN SITE, OREGON COAST

JOIN OUR EXPEDITION FROM JUNE 21-JULY 16, 2021

Instructor: Dr. Loren Davis, Professor of Anthropology (loren.davis@oregonstate.edu)

Learn modern archaeological excavation methods as we continue our study of the Devils Kitchen site, located on Oregon's southern coast near the town of Bandon. Overlooking the majestic Pacific Ocean, this site holds a fascinating record of the past 13,000 years. Our expedition will seek to learn how long people lived at the site, what their past lives were like, and how their local coastal environments changed over time. As a part of this course, students will also learn geoarchaeology field methods and archaeology laboratory procedures in a stunning outdoor classroom setting. Students and staff will camp at Bullards Beach State Park, which is a short walk from beautiful beach and estuary areas. Visit liberalarts.oregonstate.edu/field-schools to learn more about the OSU Devils Kitchen Field School and to download an application form.

Students register for ANTH 438 (12 credits) or ANTH 538 (9 credits). This course has no academic prerequisites* and all OSU and non-OSU students are able to apply. Summer 2020 tuition and fee costs for ANTH 438 (12 credits) were $3324 and $5090 for ANTH 538 (9 credits) and may change for summer 2021.

Operation of the field school will depend upon prevailing OSU policies and public health conditions as related to COVID-19.*
