Coyote’s Anthem

Out there, those hobo dogs squeal well before midnight; whatever sets one off—his scream gets the rest keening their nameless moans, solo hymns strung slope to slope, an orphans’ chorus, mutts touching the dark, vagrant notes preaching or mourning above the musky desert, songs like a migrant wind: roaming, flighty, blind.