

Climate Change, Peace and Global Social Justice

7th Social Justice Student Conference

Virtual Conference, Friday, April 21, 2023, 8 a.m.-2 p.m Pacific Time

The 7th Social Justice Student Conference, taking place during Oregon State University's Holocaust Memorial Week, will address the consequences of climate change and its repercussions for global social justice and comparative genocide research.

As the impacts of climate change become more and more visible, we are seeing more and more how even assumedly local problems require global solutions. Challenges connected to food, water, energy and biodiversity are fueling conflicts around the world, stressing existing systems and requiring all of us to develop a planetary and trans-disciplinary perspective when it comes to both identify problems and develop solutions.

We invite contributions from students, researchers and practitioners from a variety of fields which analyze the intersections of problems of climate change, environmentalism, politics, society, history, comparative genocide, and civil and human rights.

The conference will be conducted virtually.

Organizers:

- Logan Kary, Oregon State University
- Thabang Ramokgopa, S.R.H. Berlin University of Applied Sciences
- Dr. Philipp Kneis, Oregon State University
- Dr. Allison Davis-White Eyes, Fielding Graduate University

Please contact Dr. Philipp Kneis (philipp.kneis@oregonstate.edu) if you are interested in holding a virtual presentation, dialog session or panel discussion.

This conference is part of Holocaust Memorial Week, co-organized by Oregon State University's School of History, Philosophy and Religion, and the School of Public Policy, in cooperation with Fielding Graduate University.
